

TISSUE KNOWLEDGE ORGANISER

If buildings were paper, I might

they fall away on a sigh, a shift

Maps too. The sun shines through feel their drift, see how easily

in the direction of the wind.

their borderlines, the marks

that rivers make, roads,

railtracks, mountainfolds,

Fine slips from grocery shops

that say how much was sold

An architect could use all this,

script over numbers over line,

place layer over layer, luminous

or block, but let the daylight break

find a way to trace a grand design

with living tissue, raise a structure

or paper smoothed and stroked

and thinned to be transparent,

never meant to last,

turned into your skin.

through capitals and monoliths,

and never wish to build again with brick

through the shapes that pride can make,

and what was paid by credit card

might fly our lives like paper kites.

3-4

5-6

7-8

9-10

20

21

23

27

29

30

31

34

35

Context - Tissue was published in Imtiaz Dharker's The Terrorist at my Table collection in 2006.

Imitiaz Dharker – Imtiaz Dharker (born 1954) is a contemporary poet who was born in Pakistan and raised in Scotland. She has won the Queen's Gold Medal for her poetry. In her five poetry collections to date, she often deals with the search for meaning and identity, and the position of women and multiculturalism in contemporary society. Some of the other themes that she has covered include home, freedom, journeys, communal conflict and politics.

text of Islam, which Muslims be a direct disclosure of truth from God (Allah). Muslims believe that the Our'an was verbally communicated by Allah to the prophet Muhammad through the angel Gabriel, slowly over 23 years. Muslims regard the book as the ultimate miracle of Muhammad. The Qur'an describes itself as a book of guidance for mankind. In many Islamic cultures, it forms

The Our'an - The Qur'an is the central religious

Tissue— The poem explores the power and fragility of tissue. Tissue can mean two things - 1. A very thin type of paper - There are a number of references to the real life uses that we have for paper, for make their meaning deliberately ambiguous to generate further discussion and thought about regarding potential meanings – thus drawing on the reader's own impressions and ideas to create meaning. Aspects of Tissue may be described as 'impressionistic.' As literature students, we should relate meaning to the stated topic (e.g. power and conflict).

example in maps, architects arawings, and receipts.	wniist
paper is considered as an incredibly important resou	rce in the poem, its fragility is also considered: 'tissue' can easily	erode, become damaged. 2. Human tissue – our make-up,	our skin.
In this way, tissue is used as an extended metaphor f	or life.
Impressionistic Poetry - Impressionistic poetry	10.0
relates to poems or aspects of poems that do not have a secure, single interpretation. Poets may

Language/Structural Devices

Extended Metaphor

the basis for the law.

Dharker uses an extended metaphor throughout the poem, in comparing the life of mankind to tissue/paper - both fragile and powerful at the same time.

The physical frailties of paper are exposed in numerous places across the poem by Dharker, who expresses that it can 'fall away on a sigh/ a shift in the direction of the wind.' This is much the same as human life/ mankind, which can be easily eradicated by forces of nature. Paper, like human tissue, thins with 'age or touching', and can be altered by interactions (e.g. when it is 'smoothed', 'stroked.')

However, the power of mankind is also explained, mainly through the practical uses of paper stated in the poem (for example maps, receipts, the Qur'an) which are each related to important areas of life (travel, finances, religion). Dharker maintains despite more permanent 'capitals and monoliths' being built, the grand design of nature lay in our tissue what we achieve in our lives 'never meant to last.'

Quote: "and never wish to build again with brick or block, but let the daylight break'

Structure – Tissue is constructed of largely unrhymed, quatrains, which reflects the irregularity of life and the flimsy nature of tissue paper. However, the quatrains themselves are fairly regular, perhaps representing the control of man. The final stanza is only one line long, which naturally draws the reader's attention to the main idea of the poem: that the tissue represents humankind.

Quote: "turned into your skin."

Alliteration/Sibilance/Repetition - A number of sounds and words are repeated. For example, in stanza 5 there is repetition of the 'm' sound (maps, marks, make, mountain) making the whole stanza a mouthful – this mirrors the complexity of life being described through the metaphor with maps. Furthermore, words, such as 'transparent' are repeated - emphasising their importance to Dharker's message (transparent can mean 'see through' but also 'honest').

> Quote: "that rivers make, roads, railtracks, mountainfolds," Similes - Dharker uses a simile to compare our lives to paper kites. As this immediately follows details relating to how we use paper for transactions/ money, the most commonplace interpretation is that money can give us what feels like freedom (flying) but that we are still tied down by it (kite strings). Another interpretation is that our lives are at the mercy of greater forces, such as nature or the weather.

> Quote: "and what was paid by credit card might fly our lives like paper kites."

Enjambment – Dharker uses enjambment across the poem in order for multiple purposes. Primarily, enjambment in the poem undermines the controlled order of the poem – this reflects the message: mankind's power is undermined by its fragility. Enjambment also leaves lines hanging on words and their meanings. For example, in the opening line, the reader is forced to consider the dual meaning of the word 'light.'

Quote: "Paper that lets the light/ shine through, this/ is what could alter things."

Themes – A theme is an idea or message that runs throughout a text.

The Power of Mankind – Dharker makes references throughout the poem to the power of mankind through the extended metaphor with paper. The reader is shown that human life has the ability to 'let the light shine through', 'alter things', and 'trace a grand design.' Mankind is challenged to outlast even seemingly more permanent structures such as buildings.

Line-by-Line Analysis

STANZA	LINE	РОЕМ	ANALYSIS
1-2	1 2 3 4 5 6 7 8	Paper that lets the light shine through, this is what could alter things. Paper thinned by age or touching, the kind you find in well-used books, the back of the Koran, where a hand has written in the names and histories, who was born to whom,	Stanza 1 – The extended metaphor between paper and life begins. The light shining through may represent the influence of God, for light is often used as a symbol of truth or representation of the divine. The poet suggests that this is what can make a positive difference ('could alter things'). As we age, skin becomes thinner, but we also gain wisdom. Stanza 2 - The speaker continues the metaphor by suggesting that life, like the thinly worn pages of books, can be touched by others. The poem then begins to question whether we can outlive the paper records that we create.
	9 10 11 12	the height and weight, who died where and how, on which sepia date, pages smoothed and stroked and turned transparent with attention.	Stanza 3 – Reference is given to birth and death certificates, important moments in life that we formalise with paper. The extended metaphor is used again in 'smoothed', 'stroked', to show how lives are impacted by interactions with others – emotionally, physically and can be impacted by others. Stanza 4 – The speaker then transgresses to a more speculative tone, considering what it would be like if buildings were made of paper - how they would quickly 'shift' and 'drift' - the question is raised in the mind of the reader whether human impact will outlive buildings. Stanza 5 - The speaker gives a further example of a use of paper in everyday life – in the recording of maps. The socially. This also exposes the fragility of human life; how it extended metaphor persists here through the consideration of marks on the map (river, roads, etc.) and human marks (veins, scars, etc.) Sibilance of 's' helps to highlight the happier times in life. Maps are presented as delicate subject to change depending upon the political conflicts and wars – just as the human skin can be impacted in life. Stanza 6 - Another use for paper is receipts - this stanza demonstrates how our lives are ruled by money. Whilst money may make us feel free, the kite similes emphasises how it keeps us tied down - not actual freedom.

provided in designs/architects drawings. The speaker expresses through this how paper has the potential to be more powerful than brick (links with creativity and ingenuity) and people's lives can be more powerful too. Stanza 8-The human construction is considered against the brick buildings. It is presented as a far more wonderful structure. Again the speaker returns to the religious idea of Stanza 7 - Another reference to practical uses of paper is light shining through – 'grand design' suggesting that the perfect image of God is found in the living tissue of man. Stanza 9 – Human life is deemed to be far more fleeting than buildings of brick, which shows the fragility of mankind. Yet, it is also suggested that it has the potential to be far more powerful. The speaker once more shares that, like paper, lives are affected by those who touch them. Stanza 10 – The personal pronoun 'your' addresses the readers directly. The line is set alone to emphasise the message. Whilst lives can be mapped out by tissue (paper) we should be encouraged to make something far more powerful (but less lasting) with our human tissue/ lives.

Poems for Comparison Influences on the Poet

London/ My Last Duchess	Tissue can be compared and contrasted with these poems through its presentation of the power of mankind.
Ozymandias/ The Prelude (Extract)	Tissue can be compared and contrasted with these poems through its presentation of the fragility of mankind.

"As a child, I wasn't exposed to much poetry. Of course, I knew Keats and others but there was no connection in my life. Gerard Manley Hopkins, as I said, was the first one to really connect with me. Now, I can't choose a favourite poet or poem. It changes every day anything that knocks me out. It could be new poets like John Agard or Caroline Bird; Carol Ann Duffy's 'Prayer' is one – anything that's fresh and alive. In Elizabeth Bishop's 'One Art' – although I don't usually like very structured forms she uses the villanelle form (repeating the first and third lines) to convey loss so well. Interview with Young Poets Network at www.poetrysociety.org.uk